2 You will then be required to attend an information session where you will meet with at least two Directors. You will be advised of the date of this session when you return your form. This session is to explain how the station works and you will also be given a copy of the Members' Guide - a document which sets out in detail the "house rules" and complements what you will be told at the meeting. We will also discuss with you, your reasons for applying to joining the station and what your aims are. At this session you will be asked to produce some form of photo ID.

3 After the information session, your application for membership will be forwarded to the Board of Directors for consideration. This would normally be at the first Board meeting after the information session. You will then be advised by email whether your application has been successful or not. Conversely, after attending the information session, you may decide that you do not wish to proceed with your application, in which case your payment will be refunded.

TRAINING & RECORDING A DEMO

All new members who wish to go to air must go through a training procedure with a nominated trainer. This may be singly, or in a group and you will be contacted about arrangements for this.

The training will take you step by step through the operation of the studio panels as well as the various other pieces of studio equipment which you would be using as a normal part of on air work.

The training is basically of a technical kind because familiarity with the equipment must become second nature so that you can concentrate on the content of your programs. Currently, the Station is not able to provide any formal training for voice production or similar, but experienced members can certainly pass on some tips and to this end, we strongly recommend that, as part of your training, you "sit in" with such a presenter during some on air shifts.

When you have practiced using the studio equipment and feel reasonably confident with it, you should record a demo program of approximately 30 minutes duration which must contain a fair example of the type of program you wish to put to air. You will be given a sample log sheet which you must follow and this will include such items as inserts and a cross to the current news service.

You should then forward your demo to the Programming Committee which will arrange for its assessment. You will be advised of its suitability or otherwise within about four weeks.

Before final acceptance as an on-air presenter you will also have to pass a "Technical Competence" test to check that you know what all the buttons, knobs and switches do and that you can handle most situations liable to confront an on-air presenter at this station.

Once you have been approved to go on-air, you will be advised by the Programming Committee as soon as suitable on-air time is available. Initially, this may be as a co-presenter or as a fill-in presenter.

2RDJ is operated solely by its members so there are opportunities for everyone to become involved as part of the station. It's not only about being behind the microphone!

So, be involved and be part of keeping 2RDJ great.
